National League Owners See a New Baseball Light.

A WELCOME FOR CHANCE

News and Views on Live Topics of the Day, Both Amateur and Professional.

It begins to look as if the club owners in the National League had seen a new light, or in any case that the spanking administered to Herr Horace Fogel had had a most wholesome effect. Charles Webb Murphy will not stop talking. It is second nature for him to seek publicity for himself or his club, no matter what the cost to baseball or to the National League, but his utterances are likely to be less virulent and his voice less raucous, at least for a time. It was rubbing it on pretty thick to have Charles H. Ebbets, of Brooklyn, nominate Thomas J. Lynch for re-election as president, and for Murphy to second the motion, inasmuch as they had been allied against the election of the National League ever since his election two years ago. One thing, however, can be said. Charles Ebbets is the kind of a fellow who fights in the open when settled in his convictions, and it is a sure thing that he was sincere in believing that Mr. Lynch was the best man to continue as head of the League, else he would not have stultified himself by making the nomination, no matter what pressure was brought to give the impression of complete harmony.

Everything else aside, the National League took the one step that would restore in part the confidence of the "fans" by re-electing Mr. Lynch. He has proved that he is quite big enough for the job by his bold stand in handling the case and ridding the League of at least one disturbing element. It is only those who the vacuous vapors of those who stooped so low as to attack the good name of baseball in an effort to cast discredit on the "chief executive of the League" had the opportunity for him to show his true worth and ability. Mr. Lynch is stronger to-day than at any time since he took office, and while the owners still insist on handicapping him with a one year term, it seems only a question of time when they will see the wisdom of increasing it to three or possibly five years.

The action of the board of directors of the National League in the handling of the Bresnahan case may not have been quite so humorous as it appeared on the surface, but after spending much time in deciding that it had jurisdiction it was laughable to have the members pass on the "buck" to an arbitration committee in the selection of which they had no voice, only to have it passed back to them when the factions at issue found it impossible to agree on one man or more to settle the controversy. The directors welcomed the chance to shrink the responsibility, but, even when the case had come back to roost in their midst, baseball critics are not familiar with the wording of the contract, but one thing seems sure. If Bresnahan had been one of the violators of the provisions of the contract, organized baseball would have closed against him automatically. In all equity, then, it should not be possible for an owner to break the covenant with a player by any whim without the same obligation, unless restitution is made. No doubt the board of directors in time will call upon the St. Louis Club for a settlement, but in the mean time the delay works a hardship on Bresnahan, who will be unable to settle his plans for the future.

Besides the re-election of Thomas J. Lynch the National League did another thing for which it may be applauded. It recognized the ability of John A. Heydler, the efficient and hardworking secretary. Not only was his salary raised, but his term of office was increased to three years. It was deserved. Apart from the careful and conscientious way in which he always performs his duties, and apart from his handling of the world's series in this city last fall, when for the first time the thankless and difficult task was accomplished without adverse criticism, John Heydler introduced a new system for rating the pitchers in the National League this year which in itself speaks volumes. The old method of ranking by games won and lost meant little or nothing, as it failed to show the real skill of a pitcher who happened to be with a club which did not give him proper support. Under the new method runs scored against a pitcher resulting from safe hits, sacrifice hits, bases on balls, wild pitches, balks, or a hit batsman were computed. This eliminated runs scored as the direct result of fielding errors, stolen bases and passed balls. Further, no runs were charged against pitchers which were made after chances had been offered and not accepted to retire the side. This plan establishes a new chapter in baseball history which is highly appreciated by lovers of the game.

No more striking example can be offered of the value in this new method than that furnished by Nap Rucker, whom John J. McGraw has called the best left-handed pitcher in baseball. Rucker, who has been struggling along with the Superbas and suffering from a lack of that support which has meant so much to some of the other stars, moved up from twenty-eighth place in the won and lost rating to third place when standing on his own footing. Eppa Rixey moved up from twenty-third place to sixth; Mordecai Brown, of the Cubs, from thirtieth to tenth, and Marty O'Toole, of the Pirates, from twenty-seventh to eleventh. Coming nearer home, Jeff Tesreau, of the Giants, jumped from eighth to first, and Matty from eighth to second. Mr. Heydler must be congratulated for taking such a forward step.

It would take two years or more to convince the "fans" in this city that the loquacious Charles Webb Murphy was not blind to his own best interests and did not play directly into the hands of the Yankees and the American League in depositing Frank Chance as manager of the Chicago Cubs. It may be a case of one man's meat is another man's poison, but Chance will be welcomed here with open arms if he signs a contract, not only for what he has been but for what he is. In the fact that the Cubs are not loved by the rampant followers of the Giants, Frank Chance always has been admired by all fair sportsmen in this city. No one can question his ability as a manager or his skill as a player, and while his days of usefulness may be over, the field he is almost sure to have

It is hard to know whether to pity Joe Tinker or to congratulate him. The Cincinnati "fans" are not easy to satisfy. They made life unbearable for Clark Griffith and Hank O'Day, and they will not hesitate to go after Tinker if he fails to get results so quickly as expected. August Herrmann spared neither money nor pains to land him, and succeeded only after a deal, the ramifications of which included two clubs in the American League. It is hoped then that the fruits thereof will be palatable.

It strikes me that the Princeton football players did well in electing "Hobey" Baker captain of the eleven for next year. He is a quiet sort of fellow, but full of that determination which means so much in writing the word success after any undertaking. I am told by a man who ought to know that Baker knew little more about drop kicking when the last football season opened than the field of the regular team. He used to go out to the field thirty or forty minutes before the regular team for reporting, with an armful of footballs and practice all by himself in dropping goals from the field. For some days it was quite the ordinary thing for him to miss eleven out of twelve, and the few who watched him were quick to declare that he had better give it up as a bad job. Baker, however, was not easily discouraged. Slowly, but none the less surely, he improved, and the reward for his perseverance and determination came in the Yale game, when he dropped two goals from the field, and was robbed only of the honor of earning a victory for the Tigers by Pumphrey's remarkable performance of kicking a goal from the 47-yard line in the last few minutes of play. Baker should make a good leader for the Princeton eleven.

Hockey has no equal as a winter sport, and it seems a pity that its popularity should be so restricted in this district. The withdrawal of the New York Athletic Club team from the ice this year, the resignation of Yale from the Intercollegiate League, and, finally, the controversy, if such it may be called, between Columbia and the St. Nicholas Rink management are examples of the minute of why its growth has been stunted. The season may turn out to be quite as interesting as in years past, but a forced draft is none too good for any sport, and hockey is suffering for this very reason.

Cornelius Fellowes, who guides the destinies of the St. Nicholas Rink, which has a monopoly on indoor skating in this district, may have been justified for barring the Columbia squad from the rink and refusing to schedule any games which he expected to delay apportioning dates at Columbia's pleasure, and yet in his action strikes me as a bit arbitrary and of a kind to antagonize some followers of the sport to whom he looks for support. On the other hand, I am not in sympathy with Columbia's position, so far as the Intercollegiate League is concerned. If that organization considers it advisable to bar freshmen, which is now done by the leading colleges in most sports, as a partial bulwark against proselytizing, the worst, perhaps, of all athletic evils, Columbia should have decided without dilly-dallying as to whether it would accept the ruling or withdraw. This no doubt is the root of all the trouble.

Without Harvard and Yale the Intercollegiate League is now skating on thin ice, and it is only a question of time when it will pass out of existence. If it does not bow to Columbia's will in the present case just three teams will be left—Princeton, Cornell and Dartmouth. An organization with only three members should not be dignified with the title of Intercollegiate League, even though the members are in themselves representative. After all, the game is the worst sufferer, and that is why it hurts.

Another six-day race is over. Apart from the fact that the plodding, punishing grind is not invigorating to the on-lookers, although enlivened here and there by dashing, exciting sprints, one must marvel at the crowd which infested the Garden day after day. One must marvel also that human flesh and blood can stand the hours of constant physical and mental effort, the broken sleep, the irregular meals, and come back year after year apparently as strong as ever.

Maurice E. McLaughlin was deserving of a place at the top of the lawn tennis ranking.

CURTAINS BAFFLE STORMS

Novel Arrangement Makes Year-Round Motoring Easy.

To baffle the storm king in his assaults on motoring comfort has been long the aim of automobile designers and body experts. Improved windshields and tops have helped somewhat toward the end. There are a number of the market a number of practical automobile stoves and foot warmers. Special brands of robes and cold weather clothing have been evolved. The inclosed body types multiply on city streets in all their glory of coupé, sedan, landaulet and limousine.

Many motorists whose means permit maintain separate equipment for cold weather motoring. But the average man either garages his car on blocks during the coldest weather, or else does his best to last it out, muffled well in furs and getting whatever benefit he can from his side curtains.

It recently occurred to one of the Studebaker engineers that the side curtain might be made to swing with the door. He worked out a curtain of this kind and found it necessary to add only a few pieces of supplementary construction, easily removed when open sides are desired.

The advantage was so plain that the plan was worked out to a logical conclusion with a series of curtains which would tightly inclose the entire passenger compartment of a Studebaker "20" roadster. One of the details is a flap from the top which clips snugly to the top of the windshield, effectively closing a joint always troublesome with the old style curtains. With the doors closed the new Studebaker system makes a car perfectly tight, excepting two small holes for ventilation, one at either upper corner of the top.

St. George and Celtic Eleventh Score One Goal Apiece.

After battling ninety minutes up and down the soccer gridiron at Edison Field, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon in a first division New York State championship contest, the St. George and New York Celtic eleventh walked off the field with one goal each to their credit. The contest was a fast one from start to finish, and the three thousand spectators who filled the inclosure were well rewarded.

In a Metropolitan League championship game played at Montgomery Park, Jersey City, yesterday afternoon the Hibernal Field Club suffered the fifth straight defeat in the series, this time at the hands of the Fulton Field Club. The score was 2 to 0.

At Van Cortlandt Park yesterday afternoon the Clan McDuffus won their New York State League engagement with the Overseas Field Club by a score of 3 to 10.

Although the second division New York State League championship game between the German Field Club and the Anglo-Saxon Field Club at Columbia Oval yesterday afternoon ended thirty minutes before the time set forth by the league, it will go down on the record as a German victory. The score was 3 to 1. The trouble started shortly after half time, when the Anglo-Saxon manager, who was refereeing the game by the consent of both captains, put one of his own men off the field for rough tactics. The game went along smoothly for five minutes, and at that stage the Anglo-Saxons demanded the reinstatement of their team-mate. When this was refused they walked off the field in a body. The goal scorers for the winners were A. Van der Weghe, Reichwagen and C. Meir.

Superior work on the forward line, backed up with a fine defense, resulted in the Clan McDuffus winning their New York State League engagement with the Brooklyn "Celtics" at Marquette Oval, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon by a score of 3 to 1.

The prevailing score of 3 to 1 yesterday also occurred in the contest between the Columbia Oval Field Club and the St. George United, at Macomb's Dam Park. The Columbia contingent were on the long end of the score.

In a first section New York State League game at Yonkers yesterday the Hollywood Inn took the Critchley Field Club of Brooklyn, into camp to the tune of 2 to 1.

Because the only ball they had blew up seventeen minutes before the scheduled time, the game between the Eureka and Longfellow eleventh at Van Cortlandt Park yesterday will have to be replayed. The score was a tie, one goal each.

Legless Man Proves Skillful in Handling His Motor Car.

Despite the fact that he is legless, both limbs having been cut off because of an accident, Forrest I. Smart, of Haverhill, Mass., finds little difficulty in operating his Maxwell touring car, and frequently makes a fifty mile run from Salisbury Beach to Boston in about two hours. He handles his car as deftly as a professional driver.

Only one attachment was added to the simple Maxwell control system. A lever was fitted to the clutch pedal within convenient reach of his left hand, and by means of this lever the average motorist uses the clutch he is enabled to throw his clutch in and out.

"It was the simplest thing in the world for me to operate the car," said Mr. Smart. "The clutch presented the only difficulty, and that was quickly eliminated, as you can see. I feel absolutely no sensation that the car is liable to get beyond my control."

"I am a great lover of the open air, and with this husky little car at my command I can enjoy riding much better than in a motor car," he declared, and took the car out. The installation of a self-starter has made the entire problem easy."

One of the latest individual gifts in aid of the Industrial Exposition which will be held at the new Grand Central Palace for the benefit of the Bronx Hospital building from December 9 to 19 is a new $2,000 Pullman automobile which has been donated by the Stewart Automobile Company. GUNNERS MAKE BIG SCORES

Larchmont Marksmen Shoot Under Splendid Conditions.

Under conditions that were ideal for the sport the trapshooters of the Larchmont Yacht Club made some remarkable scores yesterday at their regular weekly shoot. There was a larger attendance than usual, sixteen men facing the traps in most of the matches contested.

Honors were pretty evenly divided between Ralph L. Spotts, D. F. McMahon and A. B. Alley, each of whom won two contests. In addition to being "high gun" for the day, with a score of 140 out of the possible 150 in the scratch contest, Spotts also proved the winner of the fifteen-"bird" scratch event. McMahon won "take home" trophy, both with full scores, and he made a run of sixty consecutive breaks in these and in one other match.

A. B. Alley, in the 100-target handicap, with a handicap of 25, returned a full score of 100, and he also showed good form in the special trophy match, which he won with a full score of 25. Of the fourteen that shot for the monthly cup J. Henry did the best work, returning a full score of 25, with a handicap of 3. A. Whiting and four others tied for second place with 24. J. Batterson was the winner of the ten-"bird" scratch contest with a full score, and B. M. Higginson won the leg for the accumulation cup, also with a full score. There was a second "take home" trophy shot for, in which nine men took part, and which was won by T. Lenane, Jr.

MAKE PROGRESS AT CHESS

Thirty-six Players in Tourney at Manhattan Club.

Further progress was made yesterday in the handicap tournament at the rooms of the Manhattan Chess Club, in which thirty-six players are competing for possession of the Mendoza and Martinez trophies, not to mention numerous cash prizes. The right to play for these prizes and trophies in the final tourney will be determined by the positions of the men in the three sectional contests now on.

One of the features of the play thus far is that the lower classes in each section are more than holding their own, while the players of the first class are making their presence felt. A list of the players, classes and scores follows:

Section A—Rothing (1) and Franklin (2), each 4 to 13; Rosenthal (1), 4 to 1; Laskin (2) and Stern (2), each 4 to 2; Field (1), 4 to 2; Koenig (1), 4 to 2; Koenig (2), 4 to 2; Dancy (1), 4 to 2; Landau (1), 4 to 2; Cohn (1) and Bliss (1), each 1 to 3.
